Who is the Prime Minister

The Prime Minister of Australia is the head of Government of Australia, who holds the position of Prime Minister (PM). The person elected Prime Minister, or in a country with no electoral college system appointed by the sitting government, is appointed by the head of state to serve as the national leader, with the authority to make laws, lead the government, and represent the country. The power of the Prime Minister's office has been decreasing since the 1970s. Over that time the Parliament of Australia has done a lot of work to weaken Prime Minister's office to avoid a situation similar to what happened in the United Kingdom where the position of Prime Minister became a largely ceremonial office and the Leader of the Opposition was given equal influence to the Prime Minister. How to become Prime Minister The usual way for a Prime Minister to become Prime Minister is to be elected by the members of parliament in a general election or by a special election to avoid a situation of there being no Prime Minister at all. In the United Kingdom the most famous Prime Minister to become Prime Minister without becoming an elected member of Parliament was Sir Robert Walpole, who became Prime Minister in 1721. In Australia the Prime Minister must have been elected by the Members of Parliament (3e33713323
