President Trump on Monday nominated William Bar to be the new U.S. ambassador to South Korea. The timing of the nomination is noteworthy: Trump will visit the Korean Peninsula in late April, to meet with President Moon Jae-in of South Korea, the first time a sitting U.S. president has visited the peninsula since President Obama. Assuming Bar is confirmed by the Senate and is actually able to assume his position, Bar could be a valuable asset to both the U.S. and South Korea. Bar, who currently serves as the American ambassador to Thailand, is a career Foreign Service officer and veteran of multiple tours in Asia. He will work alongside Nikki Haley, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations. Haley, a champion for U.S. sanctions against North Korea, is set to remain in New York after Trump's inaugural trip to Asia in late April. "Bar is not only an excellent choice, but also an excellent officer who has a strong track record in diplomacy," said
