Many games, including minecraft, use key combinations to provide a certain effect. Unlike other games, this app does not replace the standard key combinations, and preserves the standard ones as well. So, when you would like to use a "standard" combination, it will work just as it should. Convenience: Keybounce is a simple application designed to act as a third party replacement for the standard Windows keyboard combination handler. This is the same handler that allows the Windows key to be used as a combination for anything, including the "screenshot" function. This application is designed to work with standard key combinations, which means it doesn't try to replace the standard ones with custom ones. Intuitive Interface: With a traditional windows keyboard layout, it is easy to get used to the standard key combinations, however, if you have an onscreen keyboard, the windows key can be used in a number of other functions, so the app tries to include all of these in the default settings, making it easy to use. Also, most people do not want to get rid of the standard key combinations, so the application includes all the standard key combinations. Features: 1) Keyboard combinations: Since the application works as a third party replacement, it can be used to include your custom keyboard combinations in the Windows key functions, allowing you to be able to do things like "click" on the Windows key. 2) Windows Key: The windows key is the "quick-launch" key in windows, it functions as a shortcut to the task manager, and launches a number of other functions as well, including the screenshot key.
