When the screen is full of links to different folders, then you need to navigate from one destination to another, frequently. To help you keep your workflow more organized, Windows 10 includes a list of keyboard shortcuts for the Windows Explorer. These keyboard shortcuts are listed in the Settings app and will work for every Explorer window, not only the home screen. Since you can access the list of shortcuts from any Windows 10 Explorer window, then you can assign one or more keyboard shortcuts to every different location that is listed there. Some of the most common shortcuts include Ctrl+P for the Start screen, Ctrl+Q for the quick launch panel, Alt+S for File Explorer's Share panel, Ctrl+I for all the location that are opened in a new Explorer window, Ctrl+R for searching on your PC and Ctrl+F for search within the Windows. You can create shortcuts as you wish, such as Ctrl+P for the Start screen, Ctrl+N for the new Explorer window and Ctrl+Q for the quick launch panel. Windows 10 assigns a single shortcut for each of the location that is listed in the Settings app's Keyboard tab. To see the shortcuts that are assigned to a location, simply click on the location in the list, right-click on it and select the Shortcut key option. An empty shortcut is added to the list and it will immediately take effect in the next Explorer window, as long as the shortcut is bound to the same 81e310abbf

Cloud Xtender is an application designed to help you manage the files and backups you commonly upload to the cloud from the same location without too much hassle. Allows you to manage multiple cloud services from the same location First off, you should know that the program requires you have one cloud account where you commonly upload files or critical backups. While the application supports popular cloud services – Google Drive, OneDrive, Dropbox, Amazon S3, etc. – you add addition providers that are outside the default list. Establishing the connection to your favorite cloud services should be a straightforward process, particularly since the tool includes a wizard for this purpose. For enhanced convenience, the app allows you to create dedicated drives (or folders) to upload to the cloud from Windows Explorer's context menu as well. Includes file encryption and Windows Explorer integration It is important to note that the program supports in-transit file encryption and hence, you can make sure that a file is protected while uploading it to the cloud service of choice. The encryption algorithm used is also TNO, meaning that you can use a key that only you know about. Since the data is encrypted with state-of-art technologies like Blowfish, Twofish, Tripe DES or AES, and you can apply restrictions and security access, you can share drives or folders to more or less secure local networks. A versatile tool for managing files you store in the cloud In the eventuality that you are using multiple cloud storage services for all your business or personal storage and accessibility needs, then Cloud Xtender can make your life easier by allowing you to manage everything from one location.Q: How to use one.NET DLL with two MFC C++ projects? I have a library for scientific calculation, written in C++. This library works fine, but I have to write two C++ projects that uses this library and have to use the same dll (which is a single source dll). The first project is a console application and the second one is a MFC C++ project. My problem is, that when I call methods in the library from the second project, this class is not registered in the wxWidgets DLL list, so the DLL is not registered, and it stops working. How can I make this work, without modifying the library? Thanks A: You must export the interface needed by the console application into the C++ library, so the console
