-- Automatically organize your files and organize them into albums --Q: How to filter by the number of rows? I have a view that is returning a list of CIFs. I would like to filter this list by the number of rows returned. I want the number of returned rows to be equal to the number of CIFs listed. There is no relationship between the CIF and the number of rows returned. If I were using a simple list: CIFs = [my_cif_1, my_cif_2, my_cif_3,... my_cif_N] Then I would do: views.py def search(request): queryset = CIF.objects.all() cif_search = CIFSearchQuerySet(request.GET, queryset=queryset, search_fields=['cif']) results = cif_search.search(request.GET) return render_to_response('search.html', {'cif_search': results}) search.html {% block content %} {% for result in cif_search %} {{ result.cif }} {% endfor %} {% endblock %} I would like to do something like this instead: views.py def search(request): queryset = CIF.objects.all() count_query = CIFCountQuerySet(request.GET, queryset=queryset, search_fields=['cif']) results = count_query.search(request.GET) return render_to_response('search.html', {'count_query': results}) search.html {% block content %} {% for result in count_query %}
