The understanding of the pathogenesis of edema in various organs is. Interaction of nuclear factor kappaB with the macrophage response to stress. Nuclear factor kappaB (NF-kappaB) is a known mediator of the macrophage response to stress. We previously reported that TNF-alpha-induced NF-kappaB activation and TNF-alpha-dependent H2O2 production were mediated by different pathways in J774A.1 macrophage-like cells. The present study examined the interaction of NF-kappaB with the H2O2/macrophage response induced by lipopolysaccharide (LPS) and fmet-leu-phe (fMLP) in J774A.1 cells. We found that NF-kappaB activation by LPS (10 micrograms/ml) was blocked by PDTC (25 microM), a free radical scavenger, whereas that by fMLP (3 microM) was not blocked by PDTC. Furthermore, LPS (10 micrograms/ml) activated NF-kappaB in a dose-dependent manner and induced TNF-alpha production, but not H2O2 production, in J774A.1 cells. LPS-induced TNF-alpha mRNA expression was inhibited by PDTC. In contrast, fMLP induced TNF-alpha expression and H2O2 production without NF-kappaB activation, and PDTC inhibited only TNF-alpha expression induced by fMLP. These results suggest that macrophage activation by two distinct stimuli requires two distinct signalling pathways. The NF-kappaB pathway is important for the LPS-mediated, but not fMLP-mediated, macrophage activation.Q: Add/remove classes to div with jQuery I would like to add a class (dash-wrapper) to my div.
