I have successfully processed each bitmap to get a vector layer, and I applied gaussian blur to it. Then, I have tried to use a SVM for a classification. I applied the zeropadding to remove blurring and increase the resolution. Because of the gaussian blur, I thought SVM couldn't work. So, I have explored deep learning models like K-means, CNN, and LSTM. But I stuck again. I would like to know what kind of models can work on the hand-drawn shapes. I am currently using SVMs. I thought about some of the following models, but i don't know if they will work. 1) CNN or a kind of CNN (the fine-tuning one) 2) LSTM 3) a customized encoder-decoder I would like to know the Telomeres are repetitive DNA sequences that are bound to specific protein complexes at the ends of linear chromosomes. Telomere length is inversely correlated with replicative history and is an accurate indicator of biological age. We have studied telomere length in the blood of a cohort of 100 Asian Indian men of differing body mass index (BMI). Subjects with a BMI of 30 kg/m(2) or greater (BMI ≥ 30) had shorter (0.94 +/- 0.19 versus 1.57 +/- 0.15; P Tags The Founders' Constitution or The Textbook of Liberty is an eleven-volume collection of excerpts from the writings of the Founders of the United States, as well as commentaries, essays, and "trailers" which are added to the relevant excerpts. Volume 9 covers the Articles of Confederation, 1 through 10. This part of the book is essentially an edited republication of the Declaration and Resolves of the First Continental Congress. The exceptions are the only ones of importance: Jefferson's statement about the right to keep arms and his
