In most cases, television viewers or radio listeners merely tune to the broadcast channel that carries news and information that they desire to receive. The viewer or listener does not normally attempt to reach a desired television or radio broadcast by specifying time or channel or even by seeking out a program that is desired. A number of systems have been used for turning a television set off, for turning a radio set off or for switching from one radio frequency to another radio frequency. For example, U.S. Pat. By pressing the selection buttons, each channel can be accessed. The television channel switching system further includes a relay switch which is connected to the television channel selector. When the selector switch is actuated, the relay switch is also actuated. When the selector switch is actuated, a conductor completes a circuit and energizes the relay switch which turns off the television receiver. U.S. Pat.
