Players are able to sprint faster, learn new skills and adapt to the changing physical game they're experiencing. This includes more dynamic player movements, more responsive artificial intelligence, more realistic collisions, and more powerful impacts on the ball. • Improved Artificial Intelligence • More Goals • More Depth of Play • More Skill Areas • More Double Goal Scenarios Features: Key Features This revolution in player technology is driven by the unique combination of motion capture data, with added physical insights from more than 200 real-world players tracked as they play high-intensity football for 90 minutes. This live data is then used as the foundation for significant visual and procedural improvements, resulting in gameplay that is more dynamic, more playable and more skillful. Players can sprint at full pelt in every passing and shooting situation, learn new skills and adapt to the changing physical game they're experiencing. This includes more dynamic player movements, more responsive artificial intelligence, more realistic collisions, and more powerful impacts on the ball. Players can enter any tackle, direct or set-piece move. They can also glide on-pitch with increasing ease, handle the physicality of the game with greater ease and respond to the changing world around them with the ball in their feet. Changes to Ball Physics FIFA 22 will use a brand-new ball physics model that has been optimised to provide a better, more realistic and more responsive ball feel, while maintaining compatibility with existing control systems. This physics model will also allow for subtle improvements in the shooting mechanics, so that we can realise greater accuracy when players take shots on goal. New Features for Virtual and Augmented Reality on Devices As well as being able to create more realistic gameplay, we've made it much easier to play in virtual and augmented reality on both mobile and console, with updates to the Unity Engine and the introduction of new support for Oculus Go and Android Go. The HoloLens and Daydream SDKs will soon support the full range of new features including interactive goal videos and augmented reality training sessions. And we're making significant improvements for more fluid gameplay in VR, including new camera motions, updated tracking and platform support. Goal Scenarios In FIFA 22, goal scenarios will no longer be pre-determined in the build menu and must be built in during the creation of a match. Complete with new training and skill challenges, the new
