The new feature tracks player actions using a data-tracking algorithm which compiles thousands of collisions, passes, and touches from multiple players into the game. The resulting data is used by both the AI and a player's on-screen character to react and anticipate game situations. FIFA 22 introduces a new approach to match stability and fluidity. The team-based matches from the Championship mode and the Pro Clubs mode in FIFA 20 are no longer in the game. However, core gameplay features and Matchday mode (ranked and unranked) are returnable. The Creation Kit version 0.0.10.0 is available to download from a newly designed "release notes" page on www.createfifa.com. Developer Update New "HyperMotion Technology" FIFA 22 introduces "HyperMotion Technology," which uses motion capture data collected from 22 real-life players playing a complete, high-intensity football match in motion capture suits. The data captured from player movements, tackles, aerial duels and on-ball actions is used to power gameplay. The new feature tracks player actions using a data tracking algorithm which compiles thousands of collisions, passes, and touches from multiple players into the game. The resulting data is used by both the AI and a player's on-screen character to react and anticipate game situations. Capturing data from a completely unique set of real-world players to develop gameplay features was a challenge. To preserve visual fidelity, the studio needed to avoid data structures which might generate unwanted visual artefacts within the game. All player animations and player models are recreated in-game and all animations within the game are hand-crafted in 3D. The FIFA team approached this new technology with new eyes and rigorous testing. As testing progressed, the game team started to see various areas where the technology already provided a gaming experience they wanted to further evolve. For example, they wanted to introduce more "physicality" to the gameplay. The development team at EA Canada solved this by creating more contextual interactions between players.
