You can manage your contribution settings and donate. These settings apply globally for all projects. Just navigate to "Project Settings" in VS Code and change these settings there. Donate by using Paypal or credit card. You can select the amount of the donation (e.g. "1" means "one euro") & by which address the payment should be redirected (you can choose between e.g. "Donation Address" or "my name@weirdcorp.com"). If you want to donate more than one Euro you need to select the "Continuing" option. The donation button will change then to "Continue". You can choose if you want to contribute your credit card details to payment. If you don't like that you can click on the "Paypal icon" and create a Paypal account. Then you can donate using your Paypal account. Then simply choose the amount you want to donate. You can share the link of your donation with your friends by clicking the "Share" button. In this case, the link will be something like can then start making a donation and, if you are done, click on "Close" in the bottom right corner. After you are done with your donation, you have to reset your setting so that you don't contribute anymore. You can reset them in the "Project Settings" of your VS Code: Select the "Project Settings" file under VS Code. The selected settings file contains your donation settings and you can delete them completely. You can also make payments through bank account or other credit cards. .0? The CW just launched its reboot of "Danger The CW just launched its reboot of "DangerWoman." Thank god. Will this be the Sandra Oh "Grey's" show is always passing over the shows showcasing two great English/Irish women doing what they do in contemporary times? Since 1994? Or more exactly -- since "Grey's Anatomy?" It needs to happen. But as of now, I'm not too jazzed. As I write this, Dollhouse is running till Sunday on 11.9. This is it, apparently. All right, hello, welcome to another Neil Readings weekly review diary on time. I don't think it's been a week yet. It's been 4 days, to be exact. Friday 4, Saturday 3, Friday 3, oh, 4 days, Sunday 3. Anyway, that's life in the mad European. My mood is up because I've been in bed for a day of rebooting of 2.0-Danger Woman, the latest show from the CW. I'll be reviewing the episodes that have reached airtime in the last 4 days. This is the reboot of a show that is very 19th century -- the 1980s sexploitation classic made into a show by Steven Spielberg and Tom Hanks, co-written by Eric Roth, anchored by Sandra Oh, and featuring characters who look to be from the future. First of all, I take that back. Up until this point, there isn't been a single female in the pilot. Hurray, a female pilot. However, this show is very 19th century in the pilot episode's use of the phrase "it's a man's world," which would never be used by a woman. I'm not even sure if I care or if that's the kind of thing that could be suppressed by a woman in America, although I would love to let Hollywood know that. This show in its advertisements and films is full of proper certainties and very, very misogynistic behavior. So, here we go. This show reminded me so much of Grey's, that this is how I remember it -- Grey's concept about sexploitation type series. I mean, it's on the

Like Transformers, but with pistols, flame throwing tanks and cake... Oh, and more robots. Transformers is a free to play indie game that takes place in the same universe as the Transformers film franchise. The game features a storyline based around humanity trying to stop Megatron's plans to transform Earth into an energy-less wasteland. As the protagonist you take on a variety of both human and Transformer forms using the Transformers weapons in order to collect enough energy to power that energy shield that will stop Megatron's plan. As a Transformer player you can change into your favorite vehicle forms using the in-game weapons to overcome the enemies and obstacles that stand in your way. Gameplay involves both FPS and driving modes. The first involves getting through the story missions in a speed-based third-person shooter shooting game in the style of Borderlands, Counter Strike or similar games. The driving mode involves you controlling your Transformer vehicle in 3rd person view to get through the story missions, collect power and avoid the giant Transformers obstacles that litter the ground. This game is made by The 4 Idea

Games. The developers are a group of friends with previous experience in the games industry. They are all based in different countries around the world and this game is their first independent project.
