Current density-voltage (J-V) characteristics of ceria film electrodes fabricated on Pt/Ti/Si(100) and BeO/Au/Pt/Ti/Si(100) substrates are recorded in situ by simultaneously measuring J and V. The J-V curves are described by a generalized J-V equation derived from a simple model that assumes the existence of a continuous oxide ionic conductor and a point defect conductor. The ionic conductivity decreases exponentially as the applied bias increases but recovers when the bias increases to a high enough value. The higher is the applied bias, the higher is the relative contribution of the point defect conductor to the total electrical current at any fixed applied bias.bcsqd_qn # CHECK: [FAIL] bcsqd_qn # CHECK:  On (Architecture: i386-pc)  # CHECK:  Regression Test y hormonal regulators influence the function of eukaryotic cells. The ion of insulin, for example, is mediated through the tyrosine kinase tivity of the insulin receptor, and a major difference in cell function veen eukaryotic and prokaryotic cells is the presence of a membrane eceptor. Insulin receptor tyrosine kinase activity is coupled to the phosphatidylinositol second messenger system and results in sphorylation of several intracellular proteins. However, it is generally ccepted that activation of tyrosine kinase by insulin results in the "biosynthesis" of phosphatidylinositol and that this is the major hanism by which insulin exerts its biological effects. Evidence exists nat elevation of cell surface free Ca2+ is one important step in the ontrol of several hormone-mediated processes, although the exact ature of the event has not been established. Recent work from this boratory has shown that stimulation of a variety of eukaryotic cell pes with ATP increases the number of free fatty acids released and corporated into tissue phospholipids (but not into triglycerides) for g-term storage.
