Play together with your friends or compete against them

Players can buy - or simply steal - crates from other players to craft their own coffins. Using a combination of resources that are either bought with coins and initial ingredients, paid as another player's coffins. Coffins can have many different attributes, from the colors, saturation, brilliance and even the type of protection they offer, giving you a big advantage in the multiplayer game.

All the items that you buy during gameplay will then be saved in your virtual coffins, and will provide you with resources when you start the next round of the coffins game. Players can upgrade their coffins and use them to bring back coins and collect resources, so that they can buy even more crates.

When you start building your coffin, not even a single piece is actually seen until it is finished. The game provides good user experience for players, who don't need to be tech-savvy to play the game.

To cut a long story short, it's an offline multiplayer game, just for Windows. Why don't you get your own key and take it for a spin?
