Wonder, May 1st 2019 By Dave Bailey This year has come alive with adventure and discovery more than ever. "This year will be full of action," says Alice. Alice is a traveler herself, hopping to see the world and exploring its wonders. At the age of 12 she rode in the cab of a Coca-Cola truck, searching for a better life. She found it, and is still on a tour of discovery. When Alice was eight, she attended a family vacation. One of the highlights of the trip was a visit to Spook Rock Cave, a cave off the coast of Labrador. On the tour everyone, including Alice, got inside to explore the cave. Alice remembers, "It was cold. I could see it was a real rock cave." Well, not the ruins that are described in most guidebooks, but a real cave. Her journey started in Labrador and ended in Bragg Creek. Alice has roamed North America, from Texas to Florida, through Pennsylvania and Ohio, exploring the countless amazing sites that attracted her. She is not only a traveler, but an adventurer. On those days when she doesn't travel, Alice is often found in the back yard of her Bragg Creek home, wandering through the sandstone hill, collecting semi-precious rocks. The elements of Florence and Alice are coming together to create a powerful team. One with a path of discovery to follow. Dr. Ted C. McCubbin is a rock hound who at the age of 8 became fascinated with the large, and small, caves of western North Dakota. He became a fan of the cave hobby and wanted to share this underground world with the public. He became the director of the town of Mandan's Rock Hounds Museum, and is now the director for the North Dakota Caving Association. Dr. McCubbin is very fond of the story of Dragonia Parvula, a species of rare plant discovered in 1937 that grows only in two locations in North Dakota. "It has the unique survival trait to only flourish in places with limestone soils," Dr. McCubbin said. "While in North Dakota there is only one place where this occurs, there are 150 others in the southern United States." So, what happened? "A couple of Harvard scientists were doing their PhD work on the shores of the Chesapeake

Encodya is a dark, crime-solving adventure that showcases a unique visual style and is developed by Necromancers of Balarius – the same team that recently launched Encodia, a saga styled adventure set in a futuristic world in which the search for the "Last Encodia" relies on the discoveries of a series of young private investigators. The year 2021 has only just begun and we may already be holding out, who knows, the best point'n click of this year! This first episode of Encodya features the debut of your newly hired investigator, an overweight and burly private eye called Paul Columbus and his pitiful assistant. The story takes place on the streets of the district of Balarius, where the rich live in palatial houses and the poor are living on the outskirts of the city. But in this great city there are also a lot of ugly things happening, and someone is committing a string of horrible murders and robberies. It's up to you to investigate the case, uncover the truth and save the city. What secrets is the city hiding? Explore the fascinating streets of Balarius and solve the case. Explore the beautiful world in a point'n click adventure style, where you'll find various characters with their own motivations. Explore the living and breathing world of Balarius, where time and experience are key for progressing. Escape from a city plagued by the death of youth and the madness of the rich. Endless secrets and hidden side-quests. About This Game: In a future where personal vaults have been discredited, the true power of retaining memories and possessing knowledge lies with organizations such as the Phony Artists Union (PAU). PAU enforces the restorative policies that shaped that society, and they have a habit of eating their own kind: if a fake artist (a.k.a. "phony") is discovered, they are immediately terminated by a drone. A young aspiring artist named Teena has taken to the streets with a sketchbook and a plan to grow his artistic muscles. He's been enrolled in a special training institution, where he takes lessons from the PAU's top master. A city on the verge of economic collapse, the city's ruthless gang lord runs amok in search of a way to escape his looming death. That chance is about to arrive when your investigation suddenly leads to the discovery of the master
