There are thousands of libraries and components of which the user can take advantage, for example, to generate components in 3D. When creating a 2D drawing, you can create it as 2D or 3D. 3D drawing is a more efficient way to develop your design ideas, for example, in the first phase of a project. It is a graphics software that is extremely efficient for the drawing of an architectural or urban project. Building Information Model (BIM) - developed by Autodesk and now produced by Intergraph. The information is stored as a database of building object references in a 2D space and is used to organize information in an efficient manner. The main difference is that BIM relies on 3D CAD to store all object information. BIM enables designers, engineers and contractors to interact with and share information in a way that is not available using other building information systems.
