I have read up on the ElementTree documentation but am having trouble understanding how to correctly parse a feed that has no specific schema as i would be writing my own. The feed is not required to have a schema and the documentation for the ElementTree reader is not clear to me. For example; This is what i am trying to parse: 11 I am good 12 I am great And this is what i am trying to do: import xml.etree.cElementTree as ElementTree xml = """ 11 I am good 12 I am great """ from xml.etree.ElementTree import fromstring posts = ElementTree.fromstring(xml) for post in posts.findall("post"): print(post) It gives me the error message: line 13: element found in different context What is wrong with this

Disruption is a word bandied around a lot to describe the pace of change in all kinds of areas. So far, however, this is only true in the way we use technology. Let's face it - if you've been in work for any significant amount of time, the way your employer communicates with you has changed - and will continue to change. When I started work, my employer sent an email every morning to its employees telling them what to do and when to do it. It would be fine, but I'm not sure if it happened back then because people used email or because no-one else did it. Since then, things have moved on. The advent of more sophisticated technology - namely the internet - changed how we worked. Employers, being business owners, have now invested in a whole raft of online tools to help them communicate with their workforce, and we now expect them to continue to invest time and money as they move towards a more digital workplace. But despite the ever-increasing demand for new systems and technology, it seems that employers are still hoarding their cash when it comes to investing in these systems. It is time to spend money on a business tool that will bring real productivity benefits and something that will make your business more efficient. Business tools and technology that employees will actually want to use When was the last time you picked up your cell phone in the office? Or sent an email from the comfort of your leather chair in the boardroom? Employers today are no longer saying, "why don't you have a laptop and a mobile phone in the office?" They would rather you stay in the office because that is where they think you should be working. Having a work phone at home is a choice, but it is also now a requirement for the majority of employees. As a result, the way we work is changing, too. Not only are employees living and working in a world where they can work at any place, any time, but they also have the ability to do all this on their own terms. That means that if you work bff6bb2d33
