Photoshop works with any image format — JPEG, TIFF, RAW files, GIF, Photoshop (.PSD files), and others. Many other image software programs, such as the two-thirds of the world's Web servers, capture images and will save or export images in the.PSD format. The program is very powerful, yet easy to learn. It is available for almost any operating system, including Apple Mac, and versions are available for many operating systems, including Windows. This article covers the basics of Photoshop for beginners. It is written with beginner readers in mind and assumes that Photoshop CS5 is the edition being used. When you open an image, you're asked to either open a new document or open an existing document. If you choose to open a new document, Photoshop will create a new sheet in which to work. However, if you choose to open an existing document, it will put you in your normal workspace with its old layout. In this article, we'll be using a new document, but if you're working on an existing document, don't forget to save any changes you make. "Basic" Tools The Basic controls are available in a standard light-gray color in the top-right corner of your Photoshop workspace. The Basic controls are referred to by Adobe as a "layer toolbox" because it is used to add, move, resize, and paint with layers. In the Basic toolbox, you can see a window that usually holds two or three tools, depending on how you've assigned them (more on that later). The top tool is the Align Selection tool. When you use it, select an object and then drag it to the right or left to adjust its position. The Align Selection tool can also be activated in the menu bar in the same way as the traditional Align Selection tool (Command+T). The second tool in the Basic toolbox, the Rectangular Marquee tool, allows you to select a rectangular area of any shape, size, color, and fill color and then drag it to perform editing, such as cropping or scaling. It is extremely powerful for artistic editing, so make sure you know how to use it before you start cutting things up with it! The third tool in the Basic toolbox, the Rectangular Selection tool, is used to select a rectangular area. You can make it 1px (pixels) wide if that is what you desire, although

Q: Getting `unexpected ` at /usr/lib/ruby/gems/2.0.0/gems/railties-4.1.8/lib/rails/application.rb:280:in `initialize!` I am attempting to build a rails 4 app (in development mode), and receiving the following error: /usr/lib/ruby/gems/2.0.0/gems/railties-4.1.8/lib/rails/application.rb:280: syntax error, unexpected ',', expecting end-of-input ...rni!(self.router = routes.match_routes(self.routes)) I have looked into this issue, and the general message is pretty clear: a message that you have a problem with your gemfile. This is not the case for me. I am using an sqlite database, I added db/seeds.rb to the initializers/db_seeds.rb file, and I am using the following rakefile: require 'rake' require 'rake/task' require'sequel/dsl' task :admins_creation do admin = Admin.create!(admin_attributes_for(:admin)) user = User.create!(user_attributes_for(:user)) admin.user.create!(user_attributes_for(:user)) end Rake::Task['db:migrate:reset'].invoke What is the problem? A: There are currently a few problems with your rake file. Firstly, this line: Rake::Task['db:migrate:reset'].invoke Should be: Rake::Task['db:migrate'].invoke Secondly, the :admins_creation task has not been defined. A rake task must be define in a Rakefile, and have a name that matches the name of the file defining the task. The file must be named Rakefile. A file named task.rake is a script and will not be processed as a task definition. Thirdly, the code you included will not actually trigger the creation of any admin, user or user_admin. Assuming that Rake is installed, run: bundle exec rake db:m

My goal is to create a jar from this suite and then use that jar to run tests. One problem I'm running into is the jars don't run well in the same sbt-based project. It works fine if I run the sbt/jar/test phase (with the --jvm-option -Djava.net.preferIPv4Stack=true

--jvm-option -Djava.net.preferIPv4Hacks=true) and then run the sbt/compile/test/run phase (also with the --jvm-option -Djava.net.preferIPv4Stack=true --jvm-option -Djava.net.preferIPv4Hacks=true), but when I run the jars directly I get classpath issues. map:res0:map list [info] Loading project definition from /Users/Paul/.ivy2/cache/com.diffey/map/map/jars/jars.sbt [info] Set current project to map (in build file:/Users/Paul/Documents/github/map/).
