This is what I've done so far:

```
class Divisible(value: T) { constructor(private value: T) { } static gcd(a: T, b: T) { return b == 0? a : gcd(b, a % b); } public static isDivisible(target: T, divisor: number): boolean { if (divisor == 0) { return false; } return target / Math.abs(divisor) == target; } }
```

 But this seems like the worst way of doing it. A: You shouldn't need to run the gcd algorithm yourself. Try:

```
public static isDivisible(target: T, divisor: number): boolean { if (target == 0) { return false; } return isDivisible(Math.abs(target), divisor); }
```

 You shouldn't need the `isDivisible(target, divisor)` version - it just checks if the divisor is divisible. The type you pass to `isDivisible` doesn't really matter (we can infer `T` to be `number` - no need to explicitly tell it). If we have `isDivisible(target, divisor)` then it returns true if
