You can also try to reset your Adobe Reader settings to default and when you restart your browser Adobe Reader will prompt you to download your file. You may also need to check your network connection and firewall settings. Still cannot download the file? Please try the following steps and file the problem report if it still fails. Please do not give up! First, you need to make sure that your computer meets the requirements for installing Adobe Reader. Then, please be sure that no browser extensions are installed that prevent Adobe Reader from downloading files. If you still can't download the file, please restart your computer and try again. Last, you may have signed into www.adobe.com with a web browser other than your home web browser so that certain web browser settings are preventing Adobe Reader from downloading files.

Q: How to display a desired text to the connected clients I have a server which listen to packets from one client, and after receiving the packets, do something, and return something to the client. Now, How do I display the response to the connected clients, by using the most efficient method?
