Geography Hanscab lies north-west of Aoraki Mount Cook, at the head of the Waiatoto valley. The village can be found on the western side of the hill where the Waiatoto valley empties into the Wairaurahiri River on the south-eastern side of Mount Cook. History Until 1991 Hanscab was a public holiday campsite. It was developed by the Papple family, who owned the James Bracken Co. gold mine (New Zealand's largest open cut, with 4.5 million oz (131.5 km²) of gold reserve) in the area from the 1930s. The camp attracts both miners and holidaymakers, mostly from New Zealand, Australia and the UK. Tourists usually visit the camp during the day, while miners, especially those working on the southern end of the field and using diesel-driven equipment, often stay overnight. The camp is named after one of the brothers, H.V. Papple, who paid for the development of the area as well as constructing the main camp buildings. Hanscab has a regular pub, café and lodge, as well as a motel, caravan park and bed and breakfast accommodation. The camp is about two hours from Aoraki Mount Cook. Hanscab's close proximity to the James Bracken Co. mine caused it to be regularly affected by drifting sands from the Clyde Glacier's action. Business
