Q: ios increase a string to follow the user i am using uistap to create a selectable list. I have a button which shows a list of names and i want to make it so that when i tap on a name, the text that is written there now appears under the view with the text written in the original string

A: "So that when i tap on a name, the text that is written there now appears under the view with the text written in the original string". Create a string which is the place holder for your data. Let's call it "originalText". Now when you tap a name: get the value of the selected text in the picker view (in your case an NSString). remove the selected text set the new text to the originalText and update the UI

If you don't understand any of these, please give me more detail.

Q: Is it good practice to add user to ldap users group as early as possible? Some time ago I installed Centos6 on a VPS server, I have created an LDAP server and added the root user to my LDAP users group by following this answer. This step is already completed, but I'm pretty unsure about security here because we're using OpenLDAP which I'm not very familiar with. The question is: Is it a good practice to add users to a users group as early as possible as I did above? I know that security pros don't like this but this is the server configuration I've used for the past 10 years, and I'm not going to change it now.

A: The answer depends on the kind of root user password you are using for LDAP. If it's a non-secure password, then it's ok. However, if it's a secure password, then it's not. A root user password is used for authentication, so it's not ok to set a c6a93da74d
