band-in-a-box is intended to be used as a teaching tool for music education and should not be used for production purposes. all of the loops and instruments are licensed under a creative commons license that allows you to use them for any non-profit, educational purpose. the band-in-a-box community uses this software to generate and share music content, and we encourage you to join us. band-in-a-box 2016 provides new tools for creating realtracks. among the tools are: in-band scale enabling, which allows you to quickly enable and disable scales, and more flexibility in tempo and time during the realtrack creation process. plus, we've added realtracks with other instruments, such as a traditional ukulele style on 'ukulele realtracks', or an acoustic guitar style on 'acoustic guitar realtracks'. also, there are new in-band soloist styles, which allow you to create soloist realtracks on top of existing realtracks. for example, a 'gypsy jazz realtracks' style can be created on top of a jazz standard realtracks, and the player can choose the soloist instruments and solo style. the chordsheet window has been rebuilt for a better user experience. we also added an automatic chordsheet autofill feature, and built-in, personal chord/scale analysis tools. the chordsheet has a new layout, and adds new scales/chords to the list, including minor, major, harmonic minor, augmented, diminished, and more! we've also added an optional notes window, so that you can quickly highlight and type notes in the song, or select a specific note within a chord in the chordsheet. if you're looking for a fast way to play chords in band-in-a-box, the chordsheet is your tool of choice!

the 'band in a box' name refers to all the file types in the package, but many of the downloads are specific instruments or collections of instruments. for example, if you click on a download link that is named 'allinstruments.zip' it will download all the.aiff and.aif files in the package. the band-in-a-box songs are provided in both aiff and aif (apple interchange format) formats. the aiff files are more versatile and can be played with many audio players and recording software (with an aiff-supporting audio interface). the aif format is the format that apple uses in itunes (hence the.aif file extension) and most other apple audio and midi software. aiff files can be played by most audio players, while aif files must be opened in the apple audio/midi suite or other apple audio software. the megapak (main) download includes all of the midi styles in the package. most styles come in a variety of versions (solo, unison, etc.). in some cases a style includes several versions (example - top pop singers). each style folder includes multiple versions of each style. most styles also include a folder named 'realstyle' that contains all of the realtracks and realdrums in that style. it is recommended that you always download the.aiff files with the main.zip file, and not the.mid or.midi files. a site license allows you to install band-in-a-box on up to 5 computers or other electronic devices. if you need more computers, you can purchase a labpak (a special, 'locked down' version of band-in-a-box with fewer features) to unlock the additional machines. after installation, band-in-a-box will automatically be set to an unlimited number of computers (or other devices) that you can use. 5ec8ef588b
