snapchat combines elements of digital communication, mobile communication, and social networking. snapchat users take pictures, videos, and text messages and send them to specific friends. once they are sent, the recipient can take a look at it for a few seconds by tapping or clicking the button, and then it disappears. the sender can then send another snap to the same person or to another friend. this process repeats until everyone has had their turn to see the content or until the sender has reached the maximum number of snaps allowed by their friend. snapchat allows users to send videos and images to one or more friends, which are viewable only by the ones who select to see them. the user can set rules, such as how long a video can be viewed, how many times a user can view it, and how many people a user can send a snap to. as well as changing your face, you can change your background to the colour of your choosing. another of snapchat's most popular features is the ability to animate your videos. animated emojis perform a range of tricks like throwing baseballs and shaking hands. in the main user interface, there are four main buttons to allow easy access to all the different types of content. these are home, memories, discover and camera. discover is a category which allows you to search through content from a wide range of different accounts. if you have used instagram, these should be self-explanatory. however, if you have not used snapchat before, you will quickly see why this type of interface is very different. discover will produce a stream of content you can view, filter and interact with. these are the filters which give snapchat its character, including the very well known ones such as the shark and ball. you can apply these with a tap and they will also give off a "peek" glow effect which will quickly disappear but not before making your video appear to be swimming in the glow. as with the home, camera and memories, you can also add stickers to your photos and videos to draw the attention of your friends.

If the update doesn't have an update page of its own, you can always check for updates on your iPhone by going to the Home screen, tap App Store, open Updates, and look under Recent Updates for the message "Snapchat, v0.1.0 has been updated." If there is no recent update, there's usually a button on the update page saying "View all updates" that you can tap. Not all updates are new versions, and those can be identified by the number after the v. In the case of the last update, Snapchat version 0.1.0, it has a number of changes, including a new splash screen, automatic uploading of screenshots, sharing of photos to your photos library, and the ability to share GIFs from inside the app. What is Snapchat? Your idea of sharing is changing, now you can share whatever, however and whenever you want, with your friends with snapchat. Users get a picture, text, add a filter and send it directly to their friends - it's as easy as that! And it's a whole lot easier than you'd think! The app is free and available on both iOS and Android devices. And what's more, you can use it on all your gadgets and devices. You can use it on your tablet, your phone and even your laptop, just through your phone. What's even better is that you can use it regardless of where you are. You don't need to worry about crossing borders, you don't have to share your pictures and videos only with people you know in person, you can send them to as many people as you wish and the best thing is that the messages will disappear once they've been opened. Let me say that again: once they've been opened. First things first, open the app and connect the accounts you want to use. (You can find your friends and followers in your contacts, phone book, on social media sites or through the Find friends option in the app settings. It's as simple as that!) 5ec8ef588b
