Gt5 Car Hack Pack

the gt5 car hack pack is the creation of gareth cevipanah , and contains a working clockwork, forward steering, and steering wheel for the 2001 giulia superlight spada, as well as the center display for the rear view mirror of the 2001 giulia caprice, as well as a working left and right-side door lock. of course, there are also additional electronics found around the back of the vehicle that work with the car. some of the components are mounted into the car's body, and some of them are held by magnets. the hack pack is an extendable base that can contain a car. the black base has a handle on the top left corner and a pair of round wheels on the side. the base is teal and the car is grey. the base is extendable and an opening can be found on the side. the car consists of legs (just like a car), a steering wheel (that is extendable) and a windshield. there is also a hood (which is extendable) that is the top part of the car where the windshield is normally placed. the hack-pack has two display screens, one on the base and one on the car. the display on the base has a setup window that has an overview of the game and all of the four featured cars. the display on the car shows the track, all available tachometers, a car view (the part that can be folded out) and one of the four featured cars. pressing the share button on the controller will copy the menu information onto the base display. there are two ways to get the hack-pack. the first is to purchase a regular backpack, a denny's hack-pack, or some other hackable device for $29.95. the second is to get the hack-pack from the schick-denny hack-pack promotion, and then simply purchase a select personal care product at the schick site to get a code to unlock this hackable backpack. 5ec8ef588b
