Ample Sound AGM in AudioEdit. 1.0 for Windows.Ample Sound AGM Samples for use in AudioEdit3. This library is based on the number of notes played and/or held down during a particular note, not on the number of notes in a bar or the total number of notes in a piece. Ample Sound AGM rar. Ample Sound AGM (chord finder v.1.0). Chord finder 3.5. This library is based on the number of notes played and/or held down during a particular note, not on the number of notes in a bar or the total number of notes in a piece. Ample Sound AGM rar. When you open the advanced tab, you can select which clefs you want to make available. If you go into the notes tab, you can either find the entries for the notes in the bank by hitting the 'X' key on the keyboard or look them up by name using the search field on the toolbar. For example, you can look up 'a minor third' using the search field and see all of the octaves for this note right on the window. This is pretty cool but I dont see any way to create the notes for yourself so when you play 'a minor third' you get the note on your window and you can change it to the octave that you need without having to look it up. So its pretty cumbersome for me. I have had the sample and articulation editor buttons screwed up for a while now. I tried everything I could imagine, both under normal and Locking conditions. It sounds like I need to apply a fix from a previous version of Dorico, but I cant figure it out. Any ideas what I need to do? Thanks.
