High quality post-discharge care of children has been identified as an effective means of preventing diarrheal disease and respiratory infections in infants in developing countries. This article examines the literature on post-discharge care of infants in developing countries, focusing on the type and level of care received by infants who have recovered from diarrhea and/or respiratory infection. In-depth interviews and focus group discussions were conducted in Bangladesh and the Democratic Republic of Congo. These qualitative research methods were used to better understand the experiences of infants and their caregivers following discharge from the health facility. Findings from the research, which was guided by a conceptual framework, suggest that the quality of post-discharge care for infants in developing countries is poor. Insufficient resources and weak systems limit the provision of quality post-discharge care for infants. This article discusses these results and suggests interventions to improve the quality of care for infants. A new fluorescence assay for the detection of neutralizing antibodies to Venezuelan equine encephalitis virus. The present study was undertaken to develop a simple and reliable method to detect the presence of neutralizing antibodies (NAbs) to Venezuelan equine encephalitis virus (VEEV). A set of four E-protein encoded green fluorescent protein (GFP) expression plasmids were constructed by site-directed mutagenesis of pBACEGFP. The plasmids were used to transfect Vero cells to generate cell lines stably expressing the GFP fusion proteins.

The nature of the response to support of maternal and paternal bereavement. The present paper reports the findings of a study of the reactions of 58 bereaved mothers and fathers to bereavement support. In relation to the data obtained, a response to bereavement support was considered to be composed of a set of cognitions, emotions, and behaviours which together determine the likelihood of long-term distress. Support received was related to mental health outcomes in terms of degree of relapse and coping, and to physical health outcomes in terms of emotional/behavioural symptoms and physical strain. The patterns of response observed in this study of bereaved parents were similar to those reported in studies of other bereaved groups, such as widows and widowers. ## What's New In BeforeDo PicFloater?

What is new in this release: - Fixes compilation problems. What is new in version 1.4.0: - Improved image pinning support. Lightweight screenshot utility You can turn to this program if you need a quick way to capture screenshots on your computer without significant efforts. After launching the app, you simply need to press the "PrintScreen" key on your keyboard and select the area you want to capture. The program lets you choose between capturing an object on your screen by simply selecting it (pay attention to the outline it draws) or manually define an area by dragging a rectangle shaped box. Rudimentary toolbox After you perform the screenshot, you will notice a small toolbox next to the captured area that contains a bunch of components, designed to help you create annotations or highlight certain parts of your image. For instance, you can draw a circle or rectangle shape on your picture, write some text, and draw an arrow. The colors of the objects can be customized by selecting the desired ones from the toolbox. You can also change the font of the text. Pin or save the image Furthermore, you can choose between saving the resulting image to your computer by clicking the floppy disk button and specifying a destination path on your PC or pin it to your screen. Pinning the screenshot creates an image object directly on your screen and lets you move it around freely. Lightweight screenshot tool with image pin support To wrap it up, BeforeDo PicFloater is a portable app that can be used to capture screenshots with ease. It lets you decorate the screenshots with customizable shapes or text and save the resulting image to your PC or pin it to your screen. Women in the New England Anti-Slavery Society, 1833-1835 Women in the New England Anti-Slavery Society, 1833-1835 is an ongoing digital project of the New England Anti-Slavery Society that analyzes materials from the period, 1833-1835. The collection documents the organization, programs, and meetings of the women's branch of the Anti-Slavery Society in New England from the period 1833 to 1835. Meetings were held primarily in Boston, Massachusetts. The collection consists of meeting programs, correspondence, and meeting minutes, as well as an extensive list of attendees. The list of attendees was compiled by the secretary of the society, Ellen Campbell Prince, to compile an accurate census of all of the women who joined the Anti-Slavery Society. The collection was originally made available in 1997 as a series of transcripts from the society's annual meetings and was subsequently digitized and expanded in 2014. Images of the
