What's New in the NfsChaos?

nfsChaos is a simple animated and abstract screensaver meant to decorate your desktop when it is idle. Now you can enjoy this moving colored particles anytime you want. Enemy Heart is a tower defense game that lets you do just that. The board is a 10 by 10 grid of each of five unique sectors. The levels are set to one of four difficulty settings. The units are fixed in position, and there are no "special" units. The game supports simple and training mode play. In training mode, all units have equal strengths and stats. In game mode, units with higher stats are more effective. There are three types of units: Pixies are weak units that move slowly. Barracks are strong units that move quickly. Sentries are the strongest units that cover a wide area. Because of their wide coverage, Sentries are expensive. You can upgrade a unit to a stronger unit by clicking on it. For example, upgrading a Barracks to a Sentry will cost 50p. Performs simple linear interpolation for window placement. An image can be added to the window frame. This screensaver doesn't have any controls. Its sole purpose is to visually show the location of the mouse in the top-left corner of the screen. Leftovers From June 2015 Speaking of things I've done this month, after those last two posts, here's the third of a series that I made in June. This one is from two days ago. I know I'm a few days late, but it's from my June 9th entry. I'm sorry for the delay. Between this schedule and the fact that I'm trying to start up some new writing on the 18th, things are a little hectic at the moment. I've probably let you all down, and that's a terrible shame. But I'll try to make it up to you in the future. That said, I'll put up this. It's for a general idea, and for a place to start. By that, I mean the basic idea of the band can change and grow a lot, and I think I've done that pretty good in this. I hope you enjoy the band, and the song. The Artist is: Vocalist, Bassist, and Leader of Postmodern Jukebox, Kevin (Trey) Vandenberg. He was born into an incredibly musical family. He began singing when he was four, and didn't stop for twenty years. Kevin grew up in Austin, Texas, and started playing guitar at the age of twelve. He moved to Sacramento at the age of sixteen. Kevin was a huge fan of the Beatles and Queen, but quickly
