I have a friend who grew up in Britain. She says that her English vocabulary has suffered, both due to hearing some very strange sentences and grammar, and due to having a language in which there are some "odd" words. I asked her what the strangest phrase she'd ever heard or a word she'd never heard until encountering the "strange" English? Here's the highlights of the response. "I went to the doctor today and she told me to eat up my room." (only in America) "He thinks the policeman is called a copper" (this is not an idiom, but a typo
