Nice review but after upgrading to LR5.2 RC I think performance is better than with LR4. Working on a project with 1500 D800 NEFs my impression is that the smart previews increase speed while working in the Developer mode – in Lib. mode however everything slows because the JPEG previews are used. So far I am not sure how the Jpegs are used as previews when you have the smart previews (DNGs) available. But have to say that I am happy with 5.2 RC although I will say bye-bye to LR the day they make it part of CC.

Regards! Sren But if you like working in Photoshop, don't hesitate to make a big file if it's a truly difficult edit you're doing and you want to take advantage of the feature set. The big-file format is so plug-compatible with the platform that, in many cases, you can generate a file in PSD and open it in an external editor or a newer version of Photoshop and your major edits will still be there. You can even go from power Photoshop CS5 to ultra-scriptable, version-controlled, mobile-ready, web-ready PSD in about 10 minutes. And the ability to export a PSD as a web-ready vector package, and in the process hire and work with outside contributors, means that even if you're not a pixel craftsman, you can still have a big impact on your output. Finally, in the latest version, you can begin and complete your photo and video projects when you're offline: sharing access to an editable, version-controlled PSD is also a powerful way to crowd-source your work. P.S. You can lock your file just like you do with any PSD file. On that front, the PSD format is truly revolutionary.

My Instagram idea is to use the lighting instead of the color to make the photo more attractive. I cannot change the lighting because it is a promotional photo. The lighting is still good, but the color is not attractive. For this reason, I went to the Masking & Selection panel and created a mask. Then, I added a layer and set the fill attribute to be the same value as the image. I also added a gradient from black to the same fill color. Photoshop is part of the Adobe Creative Cloud, which includes other popular tools such as Adobe Illustrator, Photoshop Lightroom and Adobe Dreamweaver.

Photoshop Creative Cloud allows users to work on image and graphic content from anywhere.

Controlling and synchronizing workflows is the key to creative productivity. In order to do so, Adobe has introduced workflows to allow designers to direct content between their teams and different websites or applications. In order to control content, the Photoshop Editor has added new control objects that allow you to create controls that trigger content to appear in the canvas, automatically link to other assets or correct mistakes that were made in the initial assets. Photoshop has always provided tools that allow the designers to see effects and transformations operations live so that they can preview the work. This feature allows users to preview the effect of a transformation live in the canvas. The reflected and refracted effect as well as the effect of adulterated color spaces are some tools that allow you to preview the effects live. They are powerful tools as they give designers a real time preview of the operation which suits them. The latest iteration of the feature called "Maya". Designer(s) can use features on the fly, without going into the complex process of creating a new object/character via traditional workflow. With the latest tech enhancements, designers have made the workspace of their choosing a place to play, develop, and iterate their creations. In one single workspace, they can collaborate with their team members using customer roles in the scene, and then seamlessly transition to editing an object within the 3D environment. Artboards enable designers to display several digital assets on a single page for visually presenting their ideas. In Adobe Photoshop, the Artboards is a place where designers can insert their creative visions, so it allows them to share with their entire team to increase the chances of getting an approval rate. It also helps the users to determine if the composition is to be retained as a whole, or if the users want to edit the existing composition. It allows a single-click approval to trigger a workflow that synchronizes the entire team wherever they need to go.
