To evaluate the effects of massage therapy on labor and delivery in pregnant women. A blind study was carried out including a control group of pregnant women who did not receive any form of maternal care. The intervention group received standardized care along with ten minutes of maternal massage therapy. The first evaluation (prenatal) and the last evaluation (postnatal) were done with the pregnant women after they gave birth. Thirty-nine pairs were evaluated. No significant differences were detected in the labor progression variables between the groups. The hand-over-hand maternal massage provided in the delivery room did not modify the labor progression, the obstetric outcomes, the pain felt by the women and the newborn's Apgar score.Pharmacological Control of Blood Glucose. Obesity is a major risk factor for the development of type 2 diabetes and the sequelae of this complication. Diabetic Ketoacidosis is a life-threatening complication of type 1 diabetes, and when unrecognized and untreated, may quickly lead to hypokalemia, hypocalcemia, hypernatraemia, and brain edema. Hyperglycaemia and insulin resistance/insufficiency increases the risk of developing type 2 diabetes. Various classes of drugs are available for treating diabetes. The overall treatment goals for all types of diabetes are to meet patient goals (individualized for each patient and appropriate for each patient in different stages of disease), to achieve good blood glucose control, and to maintain a good quality of life.Q: Bash: Increment variable in a while loop I want to reset the processCounter variable when the counter reaches 5. I want it to start as 0 in the first while loop and I want it to increment by 1 when the condition is satisfied. The while loop is broken in the next while loop when the condition is not satisfied again
